Embracing Work-Life Harmony

A tranquil place for reflections.

RETURNING TO THE WORKPLACE.

Challenged by evolving technology and the recent pandemic outbreak, there has always been a constant need to relook at office spaces. Studies have shown that the workplace is where creative ideas take form by physical interaction and collaborative work between colleagues. By creating a safe and desirable environment that caters for different job natures, employees can look forward to coming back together for social interactions.

Even though the flexibility and convenience of remote working remains enticing, the challenges of collaboration and brainstorming through the screens cannot be avoided, such as a lack of physical interaction and miscommunication. There is a critical need for us to return to the workplace where human connection and bonding come alive.

Designed to create warm and thoughtful spaces, the Livework series is ready to play a part in transforming workspaces into welcoming and engaging neighbourhoods – a lively space where we truly enjoy.

RETURNING TO THE WORKPLACE.

“In the past, we build up relationships very quickly since we spend a large part of our time working together. Although we still communicate online while working from home, the connection does feel different.”

“My job requires me to create a large amount of content that resonates directly with our customers. I miss the days where our team gathers to bounce off ideas during brainstorming sessions.”

“I miss chatting and sharing random ideas with my colleagues in the office! It just isn't the same during video calls.”

“Now that we can work anywhere, from where do we start to draw people back to the offices?”

TODAY,
WE LEAD
DIFFERENTLY.
